FLEET FOOTED ZEBRAS.

Their Dash of Speed When Alarmed by the Whisk of a Rifle Ball.

The rapidity with which the different zebras have been exterminated, owing to the advance of civilization in South Africa, is shown by reference to such works as that of Sir Cornwallis Harris, written in 1840, in which the author tells us that the quagga was at the time found in "interminable herds," bands of many hundreds being frequently seen, while he describes Burchell's zebra as congregating in herds of 80 or 100, and abounding to a great extent, but now, after the expiration of but 50 years, the one species is extinct or practically so, while the other has been driven much farther afield and its numbers are yearly being reduced.

This author's description of the common zebra is well worth repeating. He says: "Seeking the wildest and most sequestered spots, haughty troops are exceedingly difficult to approach, as well on account of their extreme agility, and fleetness of foot as from the abrupt and inaccessible nature of their highland abode. Under the special charge of a sentinel, so posted on some adjacent crag as to command a view of every avenue of approach, the checked herd whom painted skins adorn is to be viewed perambulating some rocky ledge, on which the rifle ball alone can reach them. No sooner has the note of alarm been sounded by the vedette, than, pricking their long ears, the whole flock hurry forward to ascertain the nature of the approaching danger, and, having gazed a moment at the advancing hunter, which their bristled tails aloft, better skelter away they thunder down craggy precipices and over yawning ravines, where no less agile foot could dare to follow them."

Of Burchell's zebra, he says, "Pierce, strong, fleet and surpassingly beautiful, there is perhaps no quadruped in the creation, not even excepting the mountain zebra, more splendidly attired or picturing a picture of more singularly attractive beauty." Zebras are very means amiable animals, and though many of the stories told of their ferocity are doubtless much exaggerated they have so far not proved themselves amenable to domestication.—Saturday Review.

Dumb Luck.

I saw a case of luck awhile ago that nearly made me crazy. I was in a pool-room down in Baltimore, and I was playing close to the cushion. Nothing came my way, and I had but a few dollars between me and the touching of some friend for a stake. I saw a little fellow come in there with a $3 bill and get out with $1,402 in cash. I wasn't next, and I didn't get a cent of it. After it was all over he told us his system, and it almost made me daffy to think that any such fool scheme would win.

There were five races that afternoon, and he played them all. He parlayed his money, and $1,402 is what he pulled out. If he'd had a good sized roll when he started, he'd have broken the room sure, and every other room in the city. And what do you think his system was? You couldn't guess in a thousand years. He placed the seventh horse in every race. He started at the top and counted down to the seventh, and she won. Then in the next race there were but four horses and he counted one, two, three, four and then started at the top again and counted five, six, seven. He played that horse and won. That was his scheme. His pick won every race. And what do you think made him do it? His girl told him to. Luck? Why, some people have it to burn, and he was one of that kind. Not again in 67,000,000 years would that scheme work. I tried it for a week, and I know.—Buffalo Express.

He Married Her.

He (after the honeymoon)—Why did you use to talk so much about being afraid that some one would marry you for money?

THE TARIFF IS ON.

Yesterday the Democrats mustered 180 members, six more than a quorum, in the House of Representatives. Several of those were in custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms, under the resolution adopted last Saturday. The members under arrest voted with the others to take up the Wilson tariff bill, and a special order to take a vote on the bill on the 29th instant was carried by a vote of 175 to 1.

Wilson of West Virginia, the author of the bill and the gentleman who introduced the repeal bill at the special session, opened the debate. He attributed all the ills from which the country suffers to the tariff, as he did to the Sherman act in the special session. He said that for seven successive sessions of Congress the tariff has been the chief matter of controversy in both Houses, but he might have said as much of the silver question and added a few more sessions of Congress. The bill before the House, he said, was necessarily a compromise measure, modified by the Ways and Means committee and the financial condition of the country. While the latter made the lessening of taxes important, it made the work of reduction more difficult, as the Government receipts are less than the expenditures. He blamed the Republican party for the present condition of business and said the object of the bill is to revise and reform the vicious legislation which has caused the present deplorable state of affairs.

A Republican, probably Read or Burrows, will open the debate against the bill, but, whoever he may be, he will attribute the financial depression and commercial stagnation to the tariff. Neither party in the debate will refer to the true cause of the distress which now prevails—that is the demonization of silver. No wonder the Journal of the Knights of Labor says that funny old thing—the tariff—is again being used, as an excuse for lowering wages. Under the McKinley bill Democratic employers insist on reducing wages because trade is restricted and there are no foreign markets. Now, under the proposed Wilson bill, Republican manufacturers ask men to work for lower wages because they must compete with foreign labor.

THE MONEY QUESTION.

The money question, like Banquo's ghost, will not down. It keeps bobbing up every few days in Congress. The Hawaiian, Federal Elections, and Tariff House and Senate. The members from the West and South know that they must set themselves right with their constituents by making amends for voting for the repeal bill, if they hope to be re-elected next November. A full House and about one-third of the Senate is to be chosen, and the members who voted on the wrong side of the silver question must expect defeat if they represent Western or Southern constituencies.

The Montana Tribune has been scanning the political horizon and not only sees a silver Congress, but a free coinage President to succeed Cleveland. It says:

"Silver is going to control the next presidential election. We have looked over the States and can come pretty near the figures. There are twenty-eight States that cannot be carried on a gold platform as the situation is today. There are 444 electoral votes, a majority being 233. These States cast 237 votes or a majority of ten. The list does not include either of the Virginias, Pennsylvania, New York or Ohio, and it is a question whether either could be carried on a gold issue. The repeal of the purchase clause of the Sherman law was a covered issue, stamped with a panic to back it, and an assurance from every Senator who voted for it that he was a bimetalist. A cowardly Congress by no means includes a cowardly people. No man or party that falls to pledge itself to the restoration of silver can come within the distance pole in the next presidential race."

In the United States Senate Dolph of Oregon and Mills of Texas used the same table of statistics to prove to farmers the great benefit they derive from cheapening the prices of their products. Mills attributed this great benefit to silver legislation, while Dolph proved to his own satisfaction that it was entirely due to the tariff. Now what is puzzling the farmer, who has to sell his crops below the cost of production, is where the benefit comes in. If a Republican, he cannot dispute what Dolph says, and, if a Democrat, he must accept Mills' theory as correct, yet he finds, notwithstanding the assertions of those eminent statesmen that he has been benefited by cheap prices, that there is no profit in raising wheat or cotton.

CHARLES A. JONES, of the law firm of Clarke & Jones, has been nominated for United States District Attorney for Nevada. He is a young man of no mean ability who stands well in his profession and is eminently qualified for the position. He was one of the very few professed Democrats in this part of Nevada who stood up for the party in the last campaign and worked and voted for Cleveland and the whole Democratic ticket. He was what he professed to be, and therefore merited the respect of all who despise duplicity and admire candor.

TO IMPEACH CLEVELAND.

Republicans Awaiting Further Details Before Commencing Proceedings.

WASHINGTON, January 8.—The latest information in reference to the conference of the Republican leaders of both houses of Congress to consider whether impeachment proceedings could be instituted against President Cleveland for his actions in dealing with Hawaii is that the matter has been postponed until the latest actions accredited to Minister Willis, as reported in the Auckland dispatch and via the cutter Corwin, have been officially confirmed. That the Republican leaders have had this plan under consideration is known to be an absolute fact. It was seriously discussed yesterday and has been considered in an informal, if not formal, conference to-day. There is no doubt existing in the minds of those who have information direct from the State Department but that Minister Willis has acted just as reported.

However, Republicans of the level-headed class do not care to take up the impeachment scheme until all the facts have been officially submitted to Congress. They believe that, in view of the serious condition of affairs, this is now the only politic course to pursue. That they think that President Cleveland has gone beyond constitutional bounds is certain, for the latest move by Minister Willis, in demanding that the Provisional Government abdicate in favor of the Queen, is nothing more nor nothing less than a declaration of war without the consent of Congress, which, according to constitutional international law, leaves the President open for impeachment.

SENTENCED FOR LIFE

For Stealing One Cent from a U. S. Mail Carrier.

OMAHA, Neb., January 8.—A most remarkable sentence was imposed here to-day. Judge Dundy, at the close of the present term of the United States Court, sentenced a young man named De France to imprisonment for life. He had been found guilty of holding up the mail-carrier at Gordon. He obtained only 1 cent and received the only sentence which can be imposed for the crime.

In sentencing him Judge Dundy expressed his sorrow that such was the law, and said he thought the penalty too severe. De France is not yet twenty-one years of age, and, being desperate, waylaid and robbed a mail-carrier a few weeks ago. He got nothing but a copper cent, but in the eyes of the Federal law this was as great a crime as though he had taken thousands of dollars.

An Anti-Treat Club.

BALTIMORE, Md., January 8.—The Anti-Treat Club, an organization intended to break up in this city the ring to drinks, has been organized here. Each member is required to solemnly pledge that he will neither treat nor allow any members of the club to treat him. The restriction applies to dinners, cigars, car fares and other things, as well as the habit of "setting up" the drinks.

The club was organized with fifteen members. Its membership now is fifty, with many applicants for admission on file. Branches of the club will be started in different parts of the city.

A note from Baron Selvyne, late Belgian Minister to England, to the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs of England, dated November 22d, has been made public. It says a Belgian dispatch received from the State Department at Washington says the President does not feel called upon, under the circumstances, to ask that a monetary conference be convoked.

WHEAT.

A Great Decline in Price and Its Effect on the Farmers.

Senator Dolph in a recent speech delivered in the United States Senate, quoted from a table of statistics, which was also used by Senator Mills of Texas, to show that the farmers of the United States were in a highly prosperous condition, much more so than formerly. In this table of statistics it was shown that between the years 1873 and 1891 the articles which the farmer had to sell had declined in price an average of 26 per cent, while the articles which the farmer had to buy had declined an average of 56 per cent. Therefore they argue that the farmers are greatly benefited by the decline in prices for the reason that what the farmer has to buy has declined more rapidly than that what he has to sell.

Now let us see how much Senators Mills and Dolph know about this great benefit which the farmer has received by the general decline in prices. For example we will take the wheat crop. According to Mills' table the price of wheat declined 30 per cent. What does a decline of 30 per cent in the price of wheat mean to the farmer? All the available interest the farmer has in his crop is what it will sell for above the cost of production, and any shrinkage in the price of his crop comes directly out of the farmer's interest in that crop. A shrinkage of 30 per cent in the price of wheat may mean to the farmer a shrinkage of 100 per cent of his interest in the crop, and if his wheat has to be sold at or below the cost of production, where is the farmer going to get the money to buy these articles which Dolph and Mills claim have fallen 56 per cent? And where is the farmer going to get the money to pay the interest on his mortgage? It makes very little difference to the farmer or anyone else how cheap an article is if he cannot procure the money with which to buy.

The subsidized gold bug press never let an opportunity pass to cast aspersions on Governors Wait and Penney, because they are bold enough to tell the truth. It may be that before the Eastern and European security holders are a year older than they are now, that they will make the discovery that there is not legal tender enough in the United States to pay them the interest on their securities, which is long since past due. They have already got two-thirds of the legal tender locked up in their vaults and the interest is not half collected yet. Truly the goldbug percentage game, if not checked, is destined to absorb the earth.

Sagebrush Sketches.

It is proposed by a gentleman who is fully equal to the faithful performance of the duty, to publish a magazine to be devoted to the interests of Nevada and the development of its resources in Reno. The title selected is "Sage Land Sketches." It will be handsomely illustrated and published monthly. It will contain scientific articles on Nevada, and reminiscences of early life in the mines. It is expected to have a large sale at the Midwinter Fair, as on the cars and throughout the State.

Saved Her Life.

Mrs. C. J. Woodhouse, of Wortham, Texas, saved the life of her child by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. "One of my children had Croup. The case was attended by our physician, and was supposed to be well under control. One night I was startled by the child's hard breathing, and on going to find it struggling, I found it nearly asphyxiated. I realized that the child's alarming condition had become possible in spite of the medicines given. I reasoned that such remedies would do no avail. Having part of a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house, I gave the child three doses, at short intervals, and anxiously waited the result. From the moment the Pectoral was given, the child's breathing grew easier, and, in a short time, she was sleeping quietly and peacefully. The child is alive and well to-day, and I do not hesitate to state that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved her life."

Beware of Quackeries for Catarrh that contain Mercury. As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces, such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is too fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by P. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, contains no mercury and is taken internally, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. It is taken internally by the system. LURED TO DEATH.

Harry Poole Shot and Killed by Mrs. Shattuck of Carson City.

The following details of the shooting and killing at San Francisco on Sunday last of Harry Poole by Mrs. Shattuck of Carson are taken from yesterday's Examiner:

Yesterday at about 11 o'clock murder was done at 413 Stevenson street. The victim was Harry Poole. The bullet that ended his life was fired by Mrs. Shattuck of Carson city, Nevada, at a range so close that the powder burned the face of the victim. The bullet entered the brain, causing immediate death.

It appears that there was no actual eye-witness to the tragedy. In an adjoining room was Miss Shattuck, a Tivoli chorus girl, daughter of the woman who did the shooting, and the affianced wife of the man who was shot. She it was who first brought against the mother the charge of murder when the latter had declared that Poole had taken his own life.

Harry Poole called at the house at about 10 o'clock. He went up stairs and was talking to the daughter when Mrs. Shattuck called him into her bedroom. She was in bed and he must have gone over and sat on the edge of the bed, judging from the position in which his body was found. Almost instantly there was the report of a pistol. Truly Shattuck, the daughter, rushed in and saw him in a heap on the floor at the edge of the bed and at once became hysterical. Poole was unconscious and the blood was flowing from a wound in his right temple.

Policeman Desmond was one of the first to enter the house after the shooting. When Desmond entered the house a dramatic scene was being enacted. Mrs. Shattuck volunteered the statement to the policeman that Poole had shot himself in a fit of despondency. She seemed highly excited and hysterical. Her daughter stood by and heard the mother's statement, but she did not allow the facts to remain clouded very long.

"It's not so," she declared with intense energy. "You shot him yourself!"

And Mrs. Shattuck was placed under arrest and found not too ill to be taken to jail.

The wounded man was carried down stairs on a stretcher and placed in the patrol wagon. He was unconscious, and the blood still flowed from the wound where the bullet had entered and trickled down his powder-burned face. But a faint spark of life lingered and before the wagon had rolled over many blocks of cobbles the young man was dead.

Truella Shattuck, as she is known, has been a chorus girl at the Tivoli for a year, and stands high in the estimate of the management both as to professional ability and in personal character. Her real name is Buchardt, but she adopted that of her stepfather. The girl, though prostrated by the dreadful occurrence, told her story to Policeman Dennon.

"I loved Mr. Poole with all my heart and soul," she said. "Mother knew this and did not like it."

"I became very intimate with Mr. Poole before mother knew of the matter. Then she learned of it somehow and we have had trouble ever since."

"I was going away to-morrow. Mother insisted that I must be married to Mr. Poole before I left the city. She said she would force him to marry me if she had to."

"Then she told me to write to him and tell him to come see her. I didn't want to. But mother insisted, and said if I didn't she would."

"So at last I wrote him a note begging him to forgive mamma and that she was dying and for him to come at once to me so he could see her while she was yet alive."

"I sent this letter by a messenger boy. Mr. Poole must have come to me as soon as he received it. I took him right to mamma's room."

"Then we quarreled. Mamma insisted that he must marry me to-day. He said he would gladly if he could. But he told her he couldn't because the marriage license office was closed."

"I tried to show mamma that it would be impossible to get married to-day, too."

"But she still said it must be done. They were still talking, and Mr. Poole was promising that he would marry to-morrow, when I left the room to get a drink of water."

"I was standing in the kitchen when I heard a shot. I heard mother cry and rushed into the room. Mr. Poole had fallen with his head against the bed."

"Mother sat at the head of the bed, laughing and crying and taking on as if she were not in her right mind. Then I rushed down stairs and got the lady who lives in the lower flat to come up. When she reached mother's room Mr. Poole was lying on the floor."

She thinks her mother must have been insane, as Poole's promise to marry her to-day left no excuse for pistoling him.

The police are inclined to scout the insanity theory.

Harry Poole was a popular young man, a member of Company B, C. N. G., and fond of society. He was gay and careless, and of a character to make friends. He lived with his mother, Mrs. Newlands, at No. 634 Valencia street.

A SECOND EDISON.

Nicola Tesla One of the Greatest Scientists of the Age.

One of the most daring experimenters of the latest decade of the nineteenth century is Nicola Tesla, who was unknown in the scientific world five or six years ago, but who to-day is regarded as a second Edison.

The Scientific Press says it is impossible to sum up his achievements in a few words, he has discovered, or rather demonstrated, the possibility of illumination without wires or globules in almost exact imitation of daylight. This light he can vary to order, and although he has not been able to bring it to what he termed a commercial basis, he has advanced so far in the direction that comparative little remains to be done before the public can buy daylight by the room instead of by the lamp or light. And this is but one of his marvels. He has produced a flame which does not consume and which gives out no heat whatever, and has thus laid the foundation for untold developments in every phase of electrical work. In the production of ozone by electricity he has also scored a distinct triumph. He has shown that nearly all sanitary problems can be solved by the aid of electricity, and he has also made immense strides in the direction of solving the problem of parceling out electrical force and enabling it to be applied to manual labor in every possible direction.

He was invited to London and explain his experiments on the very spot made immortal by Faraday. He went, and was received by the Royal Institution with due honors. The moment his fingers grasped his long glass tubes they glowed with a softened splendor, and when he waved them over his head they gleamed with a radiance which was described as weird, if not ghostly. He manufactured flames which appeared dangerous in the extreme, and then placed them in a wooden box, which was absolutely unaffected by them. He repeated these experiments, with several others, while the guest of the National Electric Convention in St. Louis, at the end of February, and he also explained the details somewhat more fully.

ROBBING A POSTOFFICE.

The offender says it was a joke.

The following account of the post-office robbery at the Eagle Salt Works is given as reported by the postmaster to the officers:

Saturday evening last about 7 o'clock at the Eagle Salt Works, Churchill county, Dennis Murphy, masked and with a pistol in his hand, entered the postoffice, ordered Postmaster Willey and another man who was in the office to throw up their hands and give him what money they had on their persons; then he ordered the postmaster to open the safe and give him what money there was in it. Mr. Willey recognized Murphy and told him the money in the safe belonged to the Government, Murphy said he wanted Uncle Sam's money. Mr. Willey handed him what money there was in the safe—$33 17, Murphy said there was more money in the safe and he wanted it. Upon being assured that there was not he left. Two hours later he returned to the postoffice and said his feet were frozen, Postmaster Willey drew a revolver on him, saying "now it is my turn, so throw up your hands." Murphy gave him back the money and said it was all a joke. Meantime the postmaster telegraphed deputy U. S. Marshal Golden, at Wadsworth, who immediately went to the Salt works, took Murphy into custody, brought him here last Sunday and lodged him in jail.

Murphy's examination is to be held before United States Commissioner Waldo this afternoon.

DISTRICT COURT.

The Case of the State vs. McNaughton on Trial.

In the District Court yesterday the case of the State vs. McNaughton, charged with stealing ninety-nine English sovereigns from Frederick Bell in September last, was on trial.

McNaughton was placed on the stand and testified that he was a teacher at Star Valley and at Wells, Elko county, for several years. He came to Reno and was engaged by Alvaro Evans to work in the hay field. On one occasion when he was going to the ranch he found a valise with papers scattered around, which he replaced in the valise. He had only gone with it a few steps when he found the purse containing the sovereigns. He found the name of Frederick Bell, South Africa, on the papers and wrote a letter to him concerning the find.

Some time later McNaughton stated that he fell sick and cashed fifteen of the sovereigns to pay his expenses.

Frank Walton was brought down from the State Prison at Carson, where he is serving a sentence for stealing some of the same sovereigns, but testified that he did not know McNaughton and had never any dealings with him.

The argument of the attorneys, Clarke & Jones for the defendant and District Attorney Currier on the part of the State, closed at 9 o'clock, when the case went to the jury. As they had not agreed on a verdict up to 10 o'clock, Judge Cheney went home and they were left to make a night of it.

A TRUE GHOST STORY.

A REMARKABLE EXPERIENCE OF BISH- OP WILBERFORCE.

The Quiet Guest at the Country House and the Singular and Important Disclosure He Made When Addressed by the Bishop. The Estate Changed Owners.

The following remarkable incident in the life of the late Samuel Wilber- force, bishop of Oxford and afterward of Winchester, is related as absolutely authentic, and the good bishop himself is said to have many times rehearsed the story to his friends. Bishop Wil- berforce was most prominent among his contemporaries of the English clergy and was once a leader of the high church party. He, however, frequent- ly found time to devote to the social side of life and was sometimes styled the "bishop of society."

On a certain occasion the worthy bishop had accepted an invitation to stay at a country house not far from London. Entering the drawing room previous to dinner on the evening of his arrival, he noticed a priest—evidently of the Roman communion—sitting by the open fire and taking no part in the general conversation. The bishop was somewhat surprised at not being pre- sented to the priest, and his astonish- ment was great when, a few moments later, dinner being announced, the guests retired, leaving the priest at his place by the fire. The hostess having assigned Bishop Wilberforce the seat of honor at her right hand, as soon as an opportunity offered he remarked:

"I beg your pardon, madam, but may I inquire who was the priest we left sitting apart in the drawing room?"

"Ah, you have seen him, then?" re- plied the lady. "It is not every one who has that privilege. I cannot tell you who he is or whence he comes.

For many years this specter has haunted the house and grounds—it has, in fact, been a tradition in the family. He seems to do no harm, and although he appears only occasionally we have be- come quite accustomed to our friendly ghost."

"How very singular!" remarked his lordship. "But have you never ad- dressed your priestly spectator?"

"Indeed, I have had no opportunity, nor the desire, for that matter," re- sponded the hostess, growing pale.

"May I take the liberty now?" in- quired the dignitary.

"With all my heart, your lordship," replied the lady. The bishop arose, and returning to the drawing room found the priest where he had left him a few minutes before. Having no fear, the bishop said kindly:

"Who are you, my friend, and why are you here?"

"The specter seemed to sigh deeply and say, as though to itself, 'At last!'"

Then, in a hollow voice, addressing the bishop, he continued: "I am the spirit of a priest who left this world some 80 years ago, and I am here to impart to any one who will receive it a secret which died with me. I could not rest in my grave while a great wrong was being done which it was in my power to right. I have been re- turning all these years in the hope some one would address me, for it was not given to me to be the first to speak. All men have shunned me until now, and it is your mission to do my bidding. I was a priest of the church of Rome and was called to this house 80 years ago to receive the confession of a dying man. He was the sole possessor of a secret, the knowledge of which would alter materially the entail of this vast estate, and in his death this man wished to repair the terrible wrong he had brought upon his kin."

"At his request I wrote down the confession word for word, as he gave it to me, and when he finished had barely time to administer the final sac- rament of the church before he expired in my arms. It was very important that I should return to London that night, and in passing through the library to leave the house I concluded it would be safer not to carry the paper on which was written the confession away with me, but to place it in some secure, unseen spot, where I could ob- tain it the following day and deliver the document to the person for whom it was intended. Mounting the steps to the bookshelves, I took out a copy of Young's 'Night Thoughts,' which was the first book upon the uppermost shelf nearest the last window, and in- serting the paper carefully between its leaves I replaced the book and de- parted. A horse was awaiting me at the door, but as we reached the entrance of the grounds he took fright. I was thrown and instantly killed. Thus died the secret of my confessor with me. No one has disturbed that book in all these years, and no one has had the courage to address this messenger from the un- known. The paper will be found as I have stated, and now remains for you to correct the injustice which has so long been upon this noble family. My mission is over, and I can rest in peace."

At the close of this remarkable speech the specter faded gradually from sight, and the bishop was left gazing into space. Recovering from his astonish- ment, Bishop Wilberforce went at once to the library and found the book ex- actly as indicated by the specter. In its secluded corner, upon the top shelf, dust with the dust of ages, evidently the book had remained unnoticed many years. There was the document just as described, but now faded and yellow. The secret of the confession never became known to the world. The good bishop regarded it as a confiden- ce from the spiritual world and always ended the story with the assurance that the priestly specter was never again seen. It is a fact, however, that about the time of this extraordinary occur- rence the magnificent estate in question passed into possession of a remote mem- ber of the family, who until then had lived in obscurity.—New York Times.
